
Genocide Studies and Massive Violence

GENOCIDE STUDIES AND MASSIVE VIOLENCE - NEW STUDY COURSE

A unique course available to undergraduate students and MA candidates from a variety of disciplines, including history, political science, religious studies, psychology, theology, cultural anthropology, sociology, social work, philosophy, medicine or law.

The first of its kind at Charles University and in the Czech Republic.

After completing the course you will have extensive knowledge about:

- the causes and motivations for genocide
- some of the most important cases of genocide and massive violence which have impacted the world today
- how these crimes against humanity are represented in a variety of media and art
- how the subject can be taught at different educational levels

The course is highly inter-disciplinary. International and local scholars will give lectures and engage in close discussion with course participants. The course will be taught in English.

Genocide Studies is a cutting-edge discipline which provides deep insight into many perspectives. Originating in North America out of Holocaust Studies, today Genocide Studies is new to the Czech Republic and Europe.

Lecture + Seminar, 2 hours/week, 6 credits
